Name *.HOLLYWOOD, California — Actress Eva Longoria is calling on President Trump to rescind his “zero tolerance” immigration policy that separated migrant children from their families at the U.S.-Mexico border. In a letter posted to Twitter, Longoria wrote: “As a mother who has spent her life fighting for our rights and for children to have the opportunity to dream and pursue their dreams, I cannot stand by as our country’s leaders tear apart families.” Longoria’s tweet came amid a groundswell of support for the migrant children in U.S. detention centers and their parents, and as the Trump administration doubled down on its decision to separate children from their parents at the border. The administration has insisted that the policy will prevent child trafficking at the border — but advocates for the migrants say the policy is inhumane. They also say the “zero tolerance” policy violates the government’s own immigration laws, which are designed to stop parents from illegally crossing the border and seeking asylum. Last month, President Trump signed a proclamation that allows migrant children to remain detained with their parents — but the government’s new “zero tolerance” policy, enacted in April, says that the children must be separated from their parents if they arrive at the U.S. border illegally. Public health groups have said the policy puts the children at risk. A researcher at the American Academy of Pediatrics has called it “tantamount to torture” — although the Trump administration has so far refused to label it “torture” as legal experts have urged. Read Eva Longoria’s letter below:

Q: How to make code rerunnable after code modification? Is there a way to make a function that computes a function $f(x)$ rerunnable after any code modification? For example, I can make the following function to always output "x+1" at compile time. (Even if I delete the line 1, it prints "x+1")

#include <int> f(int x) {
    printf("%d ", x+1);
